Dear Ms. Hesse,

We have been following with interest the government's extensive role in the Microsoft Antitrust Suit. I am very pleased that a tentative settlement has been reached. The last thing our nation's economy needs is additional litigation that will lead to further regulation of the high-tech industry.

Anti-trust laws were meant to protect consumers. It appears companies are using them to protect themselves from strong competition. Settlement in this case is in everyone's best interests. We the consumer's of the United States can certainly come up with better uses for the millions of dollars the government has spent to fight this case.

Microsoft's innovation has lead to lower prices for software and increased benefits for the consumer. If antitrust law is in place to protect the consumer, where is your case? Please settle this and move-on. It is in the best interest of the government, the people and the economy.

Sincerely,
Dave Reisdorf, Inc.
